STATEN ISLAND INDUSTRIAL, COMMERCIAL, HISTORICAL

Located at the entrance of one of the greatest ports in the world, one of the five boroughs of the largest city in the world, a waterfront of fifty-seven miles and boasting of the highest altitude on the Atlantic seaboard from Maine to Florida, Staten Island holds a combination of advantages such as make it stand apart from any other locality in the entire United States.

"God might have made a more beautiful spot than Staten Island, but He never did," wrote George William Curtis. That was penned in the days when Staten Island was essentially an exclusive residential community.

Today, though large areas of Staten Island have lost none of their beauty, the noted author and statesman, alive today, might well be able to add: "And God might have given a place more natural advantages befitting the needs of man, but He didn't."

For just as Staten Island many years ago established itself as a great and healthful residential community, so today is it coming forward as one of the great industrial centers.

With a population placed at 116,000, according to the official census figures for 1920, Staten Island is linked with its surrounding localities by six ferries, one to Manhattan, one to Brooklyn and four to New Jersey, the latter distributed at points opposite Bayonne, Elizabethport, Carteret and Perth Amboy. The ferry to Manhattan is equipped with the largest and fastest ferryboats in the world. During the year 1920, according to the official statistics of the Department of Plant and Structures, the Staten Island-Manhattan ferry carried 20,504,749 passengers, an increase of 924,975 over 1919. The number of vehicles carried in 1920 numbered 596,193, an increase of 29,140 over the year previous. The total receipts for the year were $1,449,289.

In addition there is located on Staten Island the Baltimore & Ohio's freight terminal direct from the West, while for local passenger service there are in operation three railroad lines as well as the trolley lines.

And then last, but not least, there is the proposed subway, construction of which, according to legislation just passed, is insured to begin within two years. With Staten Island linked, by means of a tunnel to Brooklyn, to the remainder of the Greater City's labyrinth of tubes, the growth of Staten Island is certain to surpass all bounds within the next decade. The tube to Brooklyn will serve the dual purposes of conveying passenger and vehicular traffic.

The industrial future of Staten Island is assured for all time. The fact that the City of New York is spending upwards of fifty millions of dollars in the erection of piers and terminals large enough to berth the largest ocean-going vessels afloat is proof conclusive of this. Adjacent to the piers will be the warehouses and railroad terminals for the receipt, shipment and storage of imports and exports. This pier development promises to make Staten Island the heart of the greatest port development ever attempted by any municipality in the world.

Aside from this, however, Staten Island has already established itself as a great and growing industrial and manufacturing center. Housing the S. S. White Dental Works, the American Linoleum Company, Procter and Kamble, C. D. Durkee Marine Hardware Company, and others, it numbers many industrial plants, some of them the largest of their kind in the world.

With three large shipyards and numerous smaller ones and repair yards, Staten Island, during the war period, became the third largest shipbuilding community in the country, and this position it still holds.

The commercial growth of Staten Island is keeping pace with the industrial development. On Staten Island are located 10 banks, 45 drug stores, 95 dry goods stores, 210 grocers, 140 meat markets, 17 jewelers, 37 shoe stores, 140 builders, 22 furniture stores, 25 hardware stores, 10 lumber yards and 20 theatres, while garages, sprouting like mushrooms, defy all statistical records.

One of the greatest advantages Staten Island derives from being affiliated with the Greater City of New York is that it enjoys to the full the benefits of one of the finest municipal schooling systems in the world. It numbers 33 public schools, including three high schools. In addition it has numerous private schools including the Staten Island Academy, Wagner College and St. Peter's School. It also has ten public libraries, three public hospitals and 87 churches.

During the war, Staten Island established an enviable record for itself when it furnished more men in proportion to population than any other county in the United States, while in every loan drive it more than doubled its quota.

In the matter of good roads, Staten Island leads every county in the State of New York. With the Amboy road, Staten Island offers the direct route for all automobile tourists heading from New York City to Long Branch, Asbury Park and other points in the southern part of New Jersey. The completion of the reconstruction of the Arthur Kill road will offer in addition the direct route for all heavy vehicular truck traffic from New York City to Philadelphia. There are 300 miles of improved roadways on Staten Island built of concrete and macadam.

Staten Island was occupied by the Raritan Indians prior to the arrival of the white race. There were several large Indian villages throughout the Island, the most important being at Tottenville, Holland's Hook, Greenridge, Great Kills and West New Brighton, the latter being the chief village or council place where all negotiations with the white settlers were later carried on.

The first white man to visit Staten Island was an Italian named Verrazzini. It was in the summer of 1524, thirty-two years after Columbus discovered America. The next visit of a white man recorded was on December 3, 1609, when Hendrik Hudson anchored in the Narrows at about the same place as Verrazzini.

The first permanent white settlement on Staten Island was at Stony Brook, between New Dorp and Oakwood, where the first courthouse and church were erected, the latter being used as a place of worship by the Waldensians and Huguenots.

In 1661 Staten Island fell into the hands of the English and became a part of the British colony. One of the first acts performed by the English Governor, Richard Nicoll, was to take formal possession of Staten Island in the name of the Crown. He made a number of grants of land to settlers, and from these colonial grants most of the land titles took their origin.

The Island in 1683 was divided into four townships, namely, Castleton, Northfield, Southfield and Westfield. An additional town was created in 1866, known as Middletown, composed of parts of Castleton and Southfield. These are the five wards which today comprise the Borough of Richmond.

In 1683 the first census of Staten Island was taken: population, 200 farmers and 2,000 Indians. In 1729 the county seat was removed from Stony Brook to Richmond, in the center of the Island. After the war, which started in 1776, the English were forced to depart and the Americans organized the local government of Staten Island, known as Richmond, the most southerly county of the State of New York.

The two artificial islands off the shore of Staten Island, known as Hoffman and Swinburne, used for hospitals, were built in 1858, after the citizens had burned the Quarantine Hospital which was located at Tompkinsville.

In 1860 Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, a native of Staten Island, and the owner of ferries between New York and the east shore, built a railroad from Clifton to Tottenville. Later on, about 1880, Erastus Wiman built the Rapid Transit Railroad from South Beach to Holland's Hook. Through his influence a railroad bridge was built, which spans the Sound, giving direct rail connection between New York City and the West.

In 1895 the present system of electric street cars was introduced. In 1898 Staten Island became a part of the Greater City of New York. In 1900 the Municipal Ferry between Staten Island and Manhattan was started.

COMFORT and HEALTH

must always be a prime consideration. Discard your stoves or other crude methods of heating. You can well afford to install the up-to-date, thorough, inexpensive

Gravity Pipeless Heating System

It makes the whole house comfortable, at very moderate outlay, and minimum cost for fuel.

FAULTLESS-COMFORT PIPELESS HEATER

is an established success.

Other heating systems costing double or more do not accomplish as much.

All the heat is utilized in the simplest and most effective manner.
